MOTHERS THROW AWAY THEIR STARKING INFANTS

Missionary Writes Graphically of Suffering Among the People of China.

Pitiful tales of the suffering of the starving millions of China continue to reach the State Department in mail advices from Shanghai and Nanking. Mr. Bostick, a missionary, writing from Pochow, paints a gloomy picture of woe. The suffering poor, he says, have reached the extreme of any sort of means of sustaining life. A few months ago they were living on wheat bran. With that exhausted, they have resorted to cooking leaves of trees and even simple dry chickweed.

Free-footed children, all but naked on freezing cold days, pitifully screaming: "I'm hungry! I'm hungry!" are seen on the streets. Mothers, no longer able to provide food for their offspring, throw them away, probably in the frantic hope that compassion will force some one to rescue them. Men a few months ago able-bodied farmers have been reduced to rags, shivering with cold and facing starvation.

"Many have perished in the streets," says Mr. Bostick. "But one of the saddest cases I have heard of was that of a man who died last week near me. He was so overcome with hunger that in the last moments he picked up clods of dirt and crammed them in his mouth."

A dead cat was thrown to these pitiful pleadings, continues the missionary, because the amounts within reach are "but as a drop in the bucket."

Clothes Stolen From Dead. Mr. Bostick, citing many instances of suffering, tells the story of a sick man, somewhat improved on the day he was given out, who tried to reach the place of distribution, as he possessed a ticket for some of the food. Overcome with hunger, disease and cold, he died by the roadside before reaching his destination. His ticket and the few ragged clothes that wrapped him were stolen from his dead body.

"Among these people," continues the missionary, "there was not a single one that would not move an ordinary American to pity, who were some of the greatest objects of pity that any one in all the world ever saw. Some were seen spending their last moments in the thinnest clothes on their feet stark bare, even though the ground was frozen hard a foot deep and snow falling. Some had children wrapped up in the breasts of their garments. One poor fellow in rags and small baby in his arms was crying on his back his wife, evidently helpless from hunger. One man, who looked as though he was almost starved, was holding a baby of only a few months inside of his clothes to keep it warm. I spoke a word to him and found that the mother of the child had recently died, being unable to beg enough to eat."

Polly to Visit Phyllis. "Polly" begs to announce a return visit of her paper playmate, "Phyllis," who will dance the Swedish Bickling in next Sunday's supplement of The Sunday Star.
